at feats of strength, will act as scorer. Gaelic football is not a difficult game to understand. The players can do anything they like with the ball except to hold it in their hands. If a player picks it up he must keep dropping it and catching it again on the rebound until he has got it where he wants it or it has been taken from him by some It's a Game to Watch.

The development of the game has brought a thousand and one tricks into play, so that a man with the ball is not only playing with hands, feet and head, but is using his shoulders, his el-sensitive man. A man who objects to being accidentally kicked on the shin, "Dixle Kid," of San Francisco, and Dave Holly, of this city, met in the wind-up at the Manhattan Athletic Club. Both men weighed in at the ring side within the stipulated weight of 145 pounds. The lad from the Pacific coast proved a hard proposition for the Philadelphia boy and had a shade at the end of the battle.

The preliminaries were particularly strong attractions. Morris Harris knocked out "Wild Bill" Larry in the fourth round. Jack Roller, of Brooklyn, bested Billy Manning, of this city, figeve Crosby, of Louisville, met Sam Bolen, and honors were even at the end of the bout. The semi-wind-up to the end of the hout. Friends, but Out for Blood.

Football under the rules of the Gaelle League is a game worth going miles to see under any circumstances. To-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, at Celtic Park, the Kilkenny and Galway teams are going to play a game for the Coggey trophy, a fine silver cup emblematic of the game, and as the teams are evenly matched and made up of the best individual players since the halcyon days of the Kickhams, the Emeralds, the Barrys and the Garryowens, a bloodstirring contest ought to result.

John J. Daly, the champion long-distance runner of Ireland, will referethe contest. His rival, John J. Joyce, with whom Daly has run three exciting distance races, will be there also. John Flanagan, all-around world's champion at feats of strength, will act as scorer.

head, but is using his shoulders, his elbows, his knees and every other part of his body that he can operate to keep off the enemy.

To watch the game provides all the excitement any man wants. The real Irishman goes wild with enthusiasm, largely because of the native fondness for contests requiring strength and agility, it is no game for a tender or sensitive man. A man who objects to behind by a skillful "tripper" or trampled on, has no place in the play. That's all in the game, and it is no worse than college football at times. FIRST LOSING GAME

It is going to be a battle to the death to-morrow at Ceitle Park. The Kilkenny team was trained to the minute last Sunday to play the Waterford team for the Coggey (trophy. The Waterfords showed up, however, with two substitutes, who were County Tipperary men, and the wrangle over the eligibility of those players kept up until it was too dark to play, anyway.

The Waterfords couldn't fill the gap during the week, so the Galway team jumped in and challenged for the trophy. The waterfords couldn't fill the rape players anyway.
